

Facts You Must Know About The Vietnam War

If you are studying the military history of the world, you certainly will come across the Vietnam War trivia. There are several different viewpoints in military scholarship regarding how this war was run, what consequences it had, however; the information surrounding the war events is extremely vital for anyone with an interest in Vietnamese, American or Military history.

This war raged for almost twenty years, and was fought between the two major parts of Vietnam. The Northern Vietnam was basically a communist state, and that it was fully supported by the communist allies. The southern part was in turn supported by the US forces along with other countries who totally opposed the communist rule.

The US involvement in the war is one of the most debated topics in the US military history. The War trivia indicates that as the country was involved in an advisement capacity, it was in the early 60s that the United States started to commit significant troops to the conflict. The US involvement would reduce as well as withdraw before the actual end of the fighting which took place later in the year 1975.

There were various major troop movements as well as events that took place during this War, but the Vietnam War trivia will be at least as concerned with the reaction to the war in the US as within the battleground itself. There was more opposition to this war than any other in the US history, and the general public, specially the youth, were extremely against this war.

How long did the Vietnam War last for America?

There was an entire movement in the US called as the anti-war movement. The protests, revolting and rioting at home in the US even got violent at times. Several different campuses in particular were places that became extremely hot-blooded, as millions of youth in the United States were involved in protesting against the war as much as they possibly could do.

Part of the reason that this Anti-war movement gained a lot of traction was due to the stories that came into light regarding the American atrocities committed during the war and the general opposition to risking US citizen lives in a foreign conflict. The biggest example of protest that turned riot was during the year 1968 Democratic Convention that held in Chicago. These events lead to a giant riot that ended with 23000 guardsmen and police being turned loose on just 10000 protestors. Later in the early 70s, these protests and movements reduced as the United States began to withdraw from Vietnam. See more here